Grant Opportunities & News You Can Use

Hello Faculty,

Happy December! Based on our analysis of website clicks, December is one of your favorite times to read the Grant Opportunities Newsletter. We hope you find something helpful or interesting. This edition presents The Spencer Foundation as our “Featured Funder.” We also profile several interesting sources with deadlines coming in the next month or so—among others, the:

- J.M. Kaplan Fund Furthermore Publishing Grants
- An Editing and Translation Fellowship for Eighteenth Century works by women
- Several National Science Foundation grants in the Social Sciences
- Language and Area Studies grants for research on the Ukraine and Maghrib countries
- Congressional Fellowships for physicists who want to become engaged in public policy
- Two NSF grants for Environmental Biology
- Something for our Librarians
- News and more!

January 31 is the deadline for the next round for Internal Research Grants and for the Tow Award for Innovative and Outstanding Pedagogy Proposals. For more information, visit the Internal Grants & Support page.

If you would like assistance in finding grants for your upcoming research, please contact Kari Steeves. As always, feel free to send any comments or suggestions directly to us here.

Best,
Kari Steeves

The Spencer Foundation

“All the Spencer dough was earned, improbably, from education. It makes sense, therefore, that much of this money should be returned eventually to investigating ways in which education can be improved, around the world. Broadly conceived, wherever learning occurs.”
—Lyle M. Spencer, in his notes on the formation of the Foundation.

This broad view sets The Spencer Foundation apart from other discipline-centric Foundations. It also means Barnard faculty, even those not in the Education Department, shouldn’t rule it out when searching for funding opportunities.

“A broad approach to supporting education research reflects our awareness that the educational enterprise itself is complex; it depends on students’ cognitive development, cultural values, and social backgrounds, teachers’ practices, knowledge, and attitudes, institutional structures, educational politics, markets for educated workers, and more. On one hand, this means that, in order to realize our goal of advancing understanding that leads to educational improvement, we must be open to a wide variety of research. “

In 2016, Spencer funded such diverse grants as

- “Dank Up: A History of College Students and Alcohol,” University of Arkansas
- “Educational Inequality in the Age of Obama,” University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill
- “(Un)conditional Belongings Immigrant Youth Negotiating Citizenship, Nation, and the Politics of (Non) Belonging in Costa Rica,” Colgate University
- And the more predictable “Increasing Teachers’ Use of Classroom-based Behavior Supports through Coaching,” University of Virginia

The Foundation offers several grant-making programs, including Fellowships, Conference Grants, and Research-Practice Partnerships. Here are some of the highlights:

Small Research Grants to “support smaller scale or pilot research projects that have budgets of $50,000 or less. Proposals are encouraged from scholars across a variety of disciplines in an effort to fund field-initiated education research.” There are four deadlines a year, February 1, May 1, August 1, November 1.

Midcareer Grant Program “provides support for those who are interested in advancing their understanding of a compelling problem of education by acquiring new skills, substantive knowledge, theoretical perspectives or methodological tools. Grants are for one year with budgets of up to $150,000.” The annual deadline is usually mid-September.

The Lyle Spencer Research Awards “support intellectually ambitious, large-scale education research projects with budgets between $100,000 and $1,000,000. This program encourages proposals initiated by scholars across a variety of disciplines and fields in an effort to create much-needed space for creative and ambitious research projects that promise to advance our understanding of educational practice and its improvement.” The annual deadline is usually mid-October.

A “Strategic Initiative” of the Spencer Foundation is The New Civics, through which the Foundation has supported “projects that will deepen understanding of educational and other influences on civic action, that attend to social inequalities in civic education and civic action, and that have the potential to shape future research and practice in these fields.” https://www.spencer.org/

Sage Advice for Competitive Proposals

The publication Nature.com ran an article in May, 2017, titled, “The best-kept secrets to winning grants. Who wouldn’t want in on that?! Here’s a link and an excerpt.

“Anaesthesiologist and clinical researcher Peter Nagele started his first independent position in good shape. It was 2007 and he had already earned two early career grants for his laboratory at Washington University in St Louis, Missouri. But when he applied for his first major research grants from the US National Institutes of Health (NIH) he got two crushing rejections.

Nagele had made some rookie mistakes: one proposal, for a 10,000-patient clinical trial, was too large in scope to be eligible, and the other was not a priority research area for the agency. “Those projects never saw the light of day,” he says, “and rightfully so.”

By his third attempt he had learnt some invaluable tips and tricks. He got feedback from colleagues on his draft proposal, he talked to a grants programme officer at the NIH to work out the best strategy, and he added experienced co-investigators to his proposal.”

Sage Advice for Progress Reports

To take a somewhat different slant on sage advice, Dr. Michael Lauer, NIH’s Deputy Director for Extramural Research, provides some thoughts about writing the Project Outcomes section of interim and final Research Performance Progress Reports (RPPR) for NIH grants.

“...pay special attention to writing (Section I). That’s because any project outcomes submitted on or after Oct. 1, 2017 will be made available to the general public via NIH’s Research Portfolio Online Reporting Tool (RePORTER). You may wonder why the scientific community needs to report on outcomes and why we are making the outcomes available to the public. Reviewing reported outcomes is part of our stewardship of the public’s investment in research. Publicly posting grant outcomes provides transparency and lets the taxpayer understand what they have paid for (we informed you that outcomes would be made public in Guide Notices NOT-OD-17-085, NOT-OD-17-037 and NOT-OD-17-022). Therefore, it is important for grantees to write the outcomes for the public appropriately. Keep the description of outcomes concise and crisp, written for the layman in clear and comprehensible language. Do not include any proprietary or confidential information or trade secrets. Aim for Grade 10, so that even a 15 to 16-year-old will be able to understand the results of your research (see our pointers on using plain language to communicate the value of your research).”

Grants and Fellowship Opportunities

GENERAL INTEREST AND CROSS DISCIPLINARY

William T. Grant Foundation Research Grants
Deadline: January 1, May 1, August 1, 2018
The Grant Foundation “support(s) high-quality research that is relevant to policies and practices that affect the lives of young people ages 5 to 25 in the United States.... We fund research that increases understanding in one of our two focus areas: programs, policies, and practices that reduce inequality in youth outcomes, and strategies to improve the use of research evidence in ways that benefit youth. We seek research that builds stronger theory and empirical evidence in these two areas. We intend for the research we support to inform change. While we do not expect that any one study will create that change, the research should contribute to a body of useful knowledge to improve the lives of young people.”

The J.M. Kaplan Fund Furthermore Grants in publishing
Deadline: March 1 and September 1
“The Furthermore program is concerned with nonfiction book publishing about the city; natural and historic resources; art, architecture, and design; cultural history; and civil liberties and other public issues of the day. Our grants apply to writing, research, editing, design, indexing, photography, illustration, and printing and binding. We look for work that appeals to an informed general audience; gives evidence of high standards in editing, design, and production; promises a reasonable shelf life; might not otherwise achieve top quality or even come into being; and represents a contribution without which we would be the poorer. Book proposals to which a university press or trade publisher is already committed and for which there is a feasible distribution plan are usually preferred. In geographical reach we are drawn — but in no way limited — to New York City and to New York State and its Hudson Valley.”

ARTS AND HUMANITIES

Kress Foundation History of Art Grants Program
Deadlines: January 15, April 1, October 1
“The History of Art program supports scholarly projects that will enhance the appreciation and understanding of European art and architecture. Grants are awarded to projects that create and disseminate specialized knowledge, including archival projects, development and dissemination of scholarly databases, documentation projects, museum exhibitions and publications, photographic campaigns, scholarly catalogues and publications, and technical and scientific studies. Grants are also awarded for activities that permit art historians to share their expertise through international exchanges, professional meetings, conferences, symposia, consultations, the presentation of research, and other professional events.”

American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies Women’s Caucus Editing and Translation Fellowship
Deadline: January 15, 2018
“The ASECS Women’s Caucus Editing and Translation Fellowship, is an annual award of $1000 to support an editing or a translation work in progress of an eighteenth-century primary text on a feminist or a Women’s Studies subject. Editing and translation work of eighteenth-century texts in languages other than English are eligible. The award is open to all members of ASECS who have received a PhD. Proposals from Emeritae/i faculty that do not already have professional support for the project will also be considered. The award is meant to fund works in progress, commensurate in scope with a scholarly article-length project to a longer scholarly and/or a classroom edition with a strong scholarly basis for which research and work is well under way, rather than work that is already completed.
To be eligible for the prize, projects must translate and/or edit works by eighteenth-century women writers or works that significantly advance our understanding of women’s experiences in the eighteenth century or offer a feminist analysis of any aspect of eighteenth-century culture and/or society. Projects typically fall within the period from 1660 to 1820.”

Wabash Center for Teaching and Learning in Theology and Religion Project Grants
Deadline: February 15, 2018
“The Wabash Center understands its grant projects as learning processes. Thus, as in other learning processes, a particular grant will design moments of exploration, discovery, learning, and response for those participating in the grant project.
In building a grant project, the project director should think of the presenting pedagogical issue as that which needs exploration and interrogation, and the activities of the grant project as the means by which this exploration is done.
The design should have an appropriate scaffold to facilitate learning and critical reflection, with moments of assessment built into the design so changes can be made, if necessary. It should also have a time of evaluative reflection at the end to assess what was learned during the course of the project.”

EDUCATION

National Education Association Learning and Leadership Grants
Deadline: February 1, 2018
"Through our Learning & Leadership grants, we support the professional development of NEA members by providing grants to:
• Individuals to participate in high-quality professional development like summer institutes, conferences, seminars, travel abroad programs, or action research
• Groups to fund collegial study, including study groups, action research, lesson plan development, or mentoring experiences for faculty or staff.”

SOCIAL SCIENCE

National Science Foundation
Deadline: January 16, 2018
The following grants opportunities come due at the National Science Foundation in mid-January:
Cultural Anthropology Scholars: “to support basic scientific research on the causes, consequences, and complexities of human social and cultural variability.”
Political Science: “supports scientific research that advances knowledge and understanding of citizenship, government, and politics.”
Sociology: “supports basic research on all forms of human social organization -- societies, institutions, groups and demography -- and processes of individual and institutional change.”
Linguistics: “supports basic science in the domain of human language, encompassing investigations of the grammatical properties of individual human languages, and of natural language in general.”
Decision, Risk, and Management Sciences: “supports scientific research directed at increasing the understanding and effectiveness of decision making by individuals, groups, organizations, and society.”
Economics: “supports research designed to improve the understanding of the processes and institutions of the U.S. economy and of the world system of which it is a part.”

LANGUAGE AND AREA STUDIES

Harvard University Ukrainian Research Institute
Deadline: January 15, 2018

Return to table of contents
HURI offers several Fellowships, two of which might be open to Barnard faculty. The Institute's Research Fellowships “bring scholars from the international academic community to Harvard for focused research on projects in Ukrainian history, literature, philology, culture, and other related areas of study in the humanities and social sciences fields. In addition to carrying out their own research in residence, fellows participate in the scholarly life of the University during Harvard's academic year, and offer a formal presentation based on original research.”

The Petro Jacyk Distinguished Fellowship “is designed to bring senior scholars to Harvard University for a period of five months for focused research in Ukrainian history, literature, philology, culture, and other related areas of study in the humanities and social sciences fields. While in residence, the Jacyk Distinguished Fellow will use the University's unique resources to work on significant and innovative projects in Ukrainian studies, and in general to further his or her professional development. In addition, the Jacyk Distinguished Fellow will preside over the Petro Jacyk Seminar in Ukrainian Studies: a forum presented as part of the HURI Seminar Series in Ukrainian Studies.”

American Institute for Maghrib Studies Grants Program for US Citizens
Deadline: January 31, 2018
“The American Institute for Maghrib Studies (AIMS) announces its annual Grants Program for the academic year beginning in May 2018. The program offers grants to U.S. scholars interested in conducting research on North Africa in any Maghrib country, specifically Algeria, Mauritania, Morocco, or Tunisia. AIMS sponsors three Overseas Research Centers in the region in Oran, Tunis and Tangier and has other institutional affiliations that support AIMS scholars. AIMS only funds primary research conducted in the Maghrib.”

American Physical Society Congressional Fellowships
Deadline: January 15, 2018
“Fellowships are for one year, usually running September through August. Following a two-week orientation in Washington sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, incoming Congressional Fellows become acquainted with most aspects of their future work environment. Following interviews on the Hill, Fellows choose a congressional office — personal or committee staff — where they wish to serve. Fellows are expected to be capable of handling varied assignments, both technical and non-technical.

The Program's popularity with Members of Congress continues to grow. Typically, 150-200 congressional offices express interest in the 200-300 fellows who participate in the AAAS fellowship program. Former fellows express enthusiasm in their evaluations, and many elect to stay in the public policy arena; it is not unusual to find former fellows in influential positions in Washington.”

National Science Foundation Division of Environmental Biology and Long Term Research in Environmental Biology
Deadline: January 23, 2018
The NSF offers two separate funding opportunities for Environmental Biology with a deadline of January 23.

“The Division of Environmental Biology (DEB) supports fundamental research on populations, species, communities, and ecosystems. Scientific emphases range across many evolutionary and ecological patterns and processes at all spatial and temporal scales. Areas of research include biodiversity, phylogenetic systematics, molecular evolution, life history evolution, natural selection, ecology, biogeography, ecosystem structure, function and services, conservation biology, global change, and biogeochemical cycles. Research on organismal origins, functions, relationships, interactions, and evolutionary history may incorporate field, laboratory, or collection-based approaches; observational or manipulative experiments; synthesis activities; as well as theoretical approaches involving analytical, statistical, or computational modeling.” <<more>>

“The Long Term Research in Environmental Biology (LTREB) Program supports the generation of extended time series of data to address important questions in evolutionary biology, ecology, and ecosystem science. Research areas include, but are not limited to, the effects of natural selection or other evolutionary processes on populations, communities, or ecosystems; the effects of interspecific interactions that vary over time and space; population or community dynamics for organisms that have extended life spans and long turnover times; feedbacks between ecological and evolutionary processes; pools of materials such as nutrients in soils that turn over at intermediate to longer time scales; and external forcing functions such as climatic cycles that operate over long return intervals. The Program intends to support decadal projects. Funding for an initial, 5-year period requires submission of a preliminary proposal and, if invited, submission of a full proposal that includes a 15-page project description. Proposals for the second five years of support (renewal proposals) are limited to a ten-page project description and do not require a preliminary proposal.” <<more>>

Library Sciences

American Library Association, Reference and User Services Association, Gale Cengage History Research and Innovation Award

Deadline: January 5, 2018

“The award will be granted to an MLS degreed librarian from an ALA accredited school to facilitate and further research relating to history and history librarianship. An emphasis in an area reflected by the History Section’s subject-oriented committees, not excluding American history, is required. Those committees are: Genealogy, Local History, Instruction and Research Services, and Historical Materials.” <<more>>

From the NSF

NSF’s Big Ideas: “…10 bold, long-term research and process ideas that identify areas for future investment at the frontiers of science and engineering. With its broad portfolio of investments, NSF is uniquely suited to advance this set of cutting-edge research agendas and processes that will require collaborations with industry, private foundations, other agencies, science academies and societies, and universities and the education sector. The Big Ideas represent unique opportunities to position our Nation at the cutting edge -- indeed to define that cutting edge - - of global science and engineering leadership and to invest in basic research and processes that advance the United States’ prosperity, security, health and well-being.”

“NSF announces $19.5M in awards to support fundamental research to advance the nation’s local cities and communities
First-ever awards through Smart & Connected Communities program seek to address transportation, infrastructure, health and other rural and urban challenges
The National Science Foundation (NSF) has long been a leader in supporting fundamental research to equip U.S. cities and communities with more responsive and adaptive technologies and services. Today, NSF’s Smart & Connected Communities (S&CC) program announces its first round of awards totaling approximately $19.5 million. This funding will support 38 projects involving researchers at 34 institutions across the nation. Smart and connected communities successfully integrate people with information and communication technologies to improve economic opportunity and growth, safety and security, health and wellness, and overall quality of life. Successfully achieving this vision requires advanced understanding of the physical, social and technical aspects of our local cities and communities.
"The Smart & Connected Communities program uniquely brings together researchers across a wide range of academic disciplines to closely collaborate with diverse stakeholders in local cities and communities," said Jim Kurose, NSF assistant director for Computer and Information Science and Engineering (CISE). "The collaborative research undertaken by these groups will address challenges faced by our cities and communities, helping to transform communities and improve people’s lives."
This year’s awards address a range of applications, including public safety, water systems, community health and wellness, energy, transportation, infrastructure, manufacturing, food systems and rural and urban planning.
Many of the S&CC projects announced today focus on building capacity for long-term research innovation. These awards support planning and coordinating activities to grow interdisciplinary and cross-sector teams that in turn can foster new lines of research with meaningful community engagement for years to come.”

New at NIH! Identifying Whether NIH Considers Your Study to be a Clinical Trial is Crucial
It impacts whether you need to:
• Respond to a clinical trial-specific FOA
• Address additional review criteria specific for clinical trials
• Register and report your clinical trial in ClinicalTrials.gov
Does your study...
• Involve one or more human subjects?
• Involve one or more interventions?
• Prospectively assign human subject(s) to intervention(s)?
• Have a health-related biomedical or behavioral outcome?
If you answer “yes” to ALL of these questions, your study is considered a clinical trial.
Unsure how to answer the questions? NIH has a tool that can help!
Identifying the right Funding Opportunity Announcement (FOA) is key; for all due dates on or after Jan 25, 2018, you should determine which FOA to apply under.
How can you determine whether an FOA accepts clinical trials? It will be indicated in the FOA title or in award information.
From the National Endowment for the Arts

“In FY 2018, the NEA will award 36 Creative Writing Fellowships of $25,000 each for a total of $900,000. Fellowships alternate between poetry and prose each year and this year’s fellowships are to support prose—works of fiction and creative nonfiction, such as memoir and personal essays. The full list of FY 2018 Creative Writing Fellowship recipients is available here. This year’s fellows hail from 20 states and grew up in settings ranging from the Blue Ridge Mountains to a Midwestern dairy farm to a Native-American reservation in Washington State. Among the recipients are first- or second-generation Americans with family roots in countries such as South Korea, Iran, India, and Ethiopia. The fellows demonstrate an array of backgrounds and interests—from a writer in the tech industry to an opera librettist, an atmospheric scientist to a crime reporter. A third of the recipients have yet to publish their first book while others are critically acclaimed authors. Through its Creative Writing Fellowships, the NEA gives writers the freedom to create, revise, conduct research, and connect with readers. These fellowships are highly competitive, with 1,692 eligible applicants in FY 2018. Applications are reviewed by a panel through an anonymous process and are judged solely on the artistic excellence of the work sample provided.“This year’s Fellowships are for poetry. The deadline will be March 7, 2018.
