Grant Opportunities &
News You Can Use

Hello, Barnard faculty,

This newsletter focuses on the National Science Foundation (NSF), both as featured funder and in Sage Advice. For the latter, we summarize a study, published by David Markowitz in January, 2019, that uses text data analysis to determine how language patterns in abstracts correlate with funding levels for awarded grant applications to the NSF. Spoiler alert: all those entreaties to use plain and simple language may be steering you in the wrong direction. Read Sage Advice for details. We also include the latest News from the National Science Foundation.

After the News, you will find profiles for opportunities coming due mostly in late April. Alternatively, you can download the whole year’s Grants Calendar from the website and sort by due date, discipline, funder, or grant type.

Reminders for deadlines over the next six months can be found beginning on page eight, grouped by discipline.

Upcoming internal grant deadlines are March 8th and March 27th, the last of the academic year. See the Barnard website, here, for more information. If you have colleagues abroad whom you might like to bring to Barnard under the Weiss Fellowships for Visiting International Scholars Program, please see information here.

For assistance in finding grants for an upcoming project or to begin an application process, please contact Kari Steeves or any one of us in Institutional Funding and Sponsored Research. As always, feel free to send us comments, requests, or suggestions here.

National Science Foundation (NSF)

To go along with our Sage Advice that looks at a recent study of NSF grant abstracts, let's overview the fifth most well-funded U.S. federal agency and Barnard's most frequent funder, with 169 grants, and counting, to Barnard faculty and programs since this department began keeping database records (1988, but records may not be complete, especially for early years).

According to the NSF website, "The National Science Foundation (NSF) is an independent federal agency created by Congress in 1950 'to promote the progress of science; to advance the national health, prosperity, and welfare; to secure the national defense...’"

The NSF awards about 12,000 new awards per year from an annual budget of $7.5 billion (FY 2019). It is the funding source for approximately 24 percent of all federally supported basic research conducted by American colleges and universities, where 91 percent of its awards go. NSF awards support about 200,000 people at universities, laboratories, and field sites all over the United States and abroad. The latest tally, kept by the NSF, of Nobel Prizes won by NSF-funded researchers is 236.

The NSF is led by a Director, France Córdova, a Deputy Director, currently vacant, and a 24-member National Science Board, all appointed by the President. It is divided into the following seven directorates, each headed by an assistant director:

- Biological Sciences
- Engineering
- Social, Behavioral and Economic Sciences
- Computer and Information Science and Engineering
- Geosciences
- Mathematical and Physical Sciences
- Education and Human Resources

To get an idea of the magnitude of funding opportunities, browse the NSF's A-Z listing. It supports the NSF's claim as the agency that "funds the widest range of projects."

Beyond the basic research proposal—the NSF staple—the agency also provides funding under the following mechanisms:

- RAPID: Rapid Response Research provides emergency funding for special circumstances. For example, NSF issued a Dear Colleague letter on September 1 for projects stimulated by Hurricane Harvey and at least three grants were funded within the month.
- EAGER: "Early-Concept Grants for Exploratory Research" is for work considered "high risk, high payoff."
- RAISE: Research Advanced by Interdisciplinary Science and Engineering proposals reside at the intersection or combination of disciplines.
- GOALI: "Grant Opportunities for Academic Liaison and Industry" research projects that utilize industry professional expertise.
- Ideas Lab: funds high risk/high impact, creative and innovative proposals that have the potential to transform paradigms.
- FASED: Facilitation Awards for Scientists and engineers with Disabilities funds equipment that allows people with uncommon needs to conduct research.
- Conferences: NSF supports conferences to bring experts together in special areas.
- Equipment: for specialized equipment.
- Travel: for participation in domestic or international meetings.
- Center: These provide for work beyond the scope and scale of individual investigations.
- Fellowships: for graduate and post-doctorate research.

What Big Data Text Analysis Says About NSF Grant Applications

In a recent article titled, “What Words Are Worth,” in the Journal of Language and Social Psychology, David M. Markowitz of the University of Oregon, Eugene, lays out his findings from a “big data” research study in which he examines word patterns in abstracts submitted in applications to the National Science Foundation. You may be interested to know that some of the findings contradict NSF advice that we have repeated, with ignorant bliss, in past Sage Advice columns.

Notably, “a one-word increase in abstract length corresponds to a $372 increase in the amount of money received.” However, be warned that “excessively long abstracts tend to receive less funding.” This kind of needle-threading calls for specifics: Average award abstracts contained 378.42 words. The third (upper) quartile = 447 words and the upper extremum = 681 words. Don’t go there, apparently.

Second, “as the number of words per sentence increases, funding amount also increases.” Again, let’s get specific. The average number of words in a sentence is 28.28. Q1 = 24.40 words per sentence and Q3 = 31.24 words per sentence. Markowitz links longer sentences with structural and linguistic complexity. Reviewers like that. (And that three word sentence is really bringing my average down.) In keeping with a love of complexity, “using fewer common words in English associates with receiving more award money.” This is the finding that flies in the face of NSF’s guidelines for plain and simple language. His results imply that applicants may want to reconsider those guidelines and the innumerable grant-writing columnists profiled here, and use that jargon and those fifty-cent vocabulary words!

He also argues applicants should use more pronouns, conjunctions, adverbs, and negations. The theory is that those parts of speech are used more frequently in narrative writing styles, whereas articles and prepositions appear more often in analytical reports. Reviewers, it seems, might appreciate complicated concepts, but they want them delivered in a style and flow that reads like a story. “While the authors’ writing structure and content should be complex, how they communicate the science should be dynamic.... A personal touch, with more pronouns relative to articles or prepositions, is associated with receiving more money from the NSF.”

Lastly, let’s talk about word choice. “Grant abstracts written with more verbal certainty...and less tentativeness—also correlate with more grant funding from the NSF.” Words like absolute, exact, definite, essential—and not if, hope, almost, doubt, guess—express confidence. Perhaps it comes as no surprise that confidence trumps conditionality. Reviewers also seem to like causal words (infer, intend, or solve). “A more upbeat verbal tone...more verbal expressions of motivation and drive...and more adjectives,” Markowitz notes, “correlate with an increase in grant funding.... These data indicate that detailed and enthusiastic science writing can associate with more money awarded by the NSF.” (If you’re wondering, my ellipses excise formulas.)

Markowitz summarizes, “A writing style that is structurally complex with fewer common words, but is written like a story and expresses more scientific certainty, correlates with receiving more money from the NSF. Less grant funding is associated with abstracts that are too long and contain a tentative style.” Notice he says CORRELATES, not causates, (perhaps because causates is not a word). I personally am taking these findings to heart, embracing long words, complex sentences, and a confident narrative style. Can you tell?

News Items

From the NSF
“Due to the recent lapse in appropriations, implementation of the revised NSF Proposal & Award Policies & Procedures Guide (PAPPG), (NSF 19-1) was postponed. We are pleased to announce that the revised PAPPG will now be effective for proposals submitted, or due, on or after February 25, 2019. Significant changes include:

- Addition of Research.gov as an option for proposal preparation and submission, and proposal file updates;
- Revision of eligibility standards for unaffiliated individuals;
- Specification that conference proposals over $50,000 and all equipment proposals must include the Collaborators and Other Affiliations information in the proposal submission;
- Revision of resubmission guidelines for NSF programs that accept proposals at any time;
- Implementation of NSF’s policy on sexual harassment and other forms of harassment, or sexual assault;
- Specification that proposers are required to have a policy or code-of-conduct that addresses sexual harassment, other forms of harassment, and sexual assault, and that includes clear and accessible means of reporting violations of the policy or code-of-conduct. This policy or code-of-conduct must be disseminated to conference participants prior to attendance at the conference as well as made available at the conference itself;
- Emphasis on the importance of training faculty in the responsible and ethical conduct of research;
- Incorporation of existing patent policy into the PAPPG. This policy was previously implemented by regulation at 45 CFR 650; and
- Numerous clarifications and other changes throughout the document;

You are encouraged to review the by-chapter summary of changes provided in the Introduction section of the PAPPG.

To learn about the changes in the revised PAPPG (NSF 19-1), please view the latest NSF Proposal & Award Policy Update webinar.”

Grant Opportunities

GENERAL

Columbia Brown Institute Magic Grant
Deadline: April 8, 2019
"Magic Grants provide year-long funding awards of up to $150,000 ($300,000 for teams with members of both the Columbia and Stanford communities). In addition to funding, grantees have access to a distinguished advisory and mentoring group, an extensive and inspiring alumni network. We are looking for hardware, software, and story proposals. We are interested in projects that advance storytelling and journalism through new applications of technology. We also are interested in new tools and technologies that extend media broadly.” <<more>>

Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study Fellowships
Deadline: April 15, 2019
"NIAS offers individual fellowships to scholars who wish to carry out advanced research in the humanities and the social sciences. For five or ten months, scholars are offered the time and space to work on a topic of their own choice. Scholars must have at least 3 years of post-Ph.D. degree academic experience and have already made a considerable contribution to their field. The fellowships provide a stipend and housing accommodations." <<more>>
Grant Opportunities

Project Management Institute
Sponsored Research Program
Deadline: April 25, 2019

"Each year, PMI Academic Programs solicit proposals for research funding on any topic related to project, program or portfolio management. Proposed research must have direct application to some aspect of the project management body of knowledge or its practice. Awards up to US$50,000 are granted to selected recipients both within and outside the field of project management, including management, organizational psychology, sociology, education, linguistics and others. We encourage proposals on research involving multi-disciplinary teams of investigators or teams consisting of academics and practitioners who bring new ways of thinking and related bodies of literature to the field."

National Library of Australia Fellowships
Deadline: April 26, 2019

"The National Library of Australia offers a range of Fellowships and Scholarships for established and emerging researchers, practising writers and creative artists, and younger scholars. These are designed to stimulate sustained scholarly, literary and artistic use of our collections, and promote lively interaction within the Library’s community. Through the program, researchers gain in-depth access to Library collections and staff expertise, financial assistance, and uninterrupted time for research in a respected and supportive scholarly environment."

Lawrence Foundation
Grants in Environment and Human Services
Deadline: April 30, 2019

"The Lawrence Foundation is a private family foundation focused on making grants to support environmental, human services and other causes although our interests are fairly diverse and may lead us into other areas on an occasional basis. We make both program and operating grants."

ARTS AND HUMANITIES

Coordinating Council for Women in History
Nupur Chaudhuri First Article Prize
Deadline: April 2, 2019

"The CCWH Nupur Chaudhuri Article Prize is an annual $1000 prize that recognizes the best first article published in the field of history by a CCWH member. Named to honor long-time CCWH board member and former executive director and co-president from 1995-1998 Nupur Chaudhuri, the article must be published in a refereed journal in one of the two years proceeding the prize year. An article may only be submitted once. All fields of history will be considered, and articles must be submitted with full scholarly apparatus."

University of Sydney
Visiting Research Fellowship
Deadline: April 30, 2019

This scheme enables local and international scholars to undertake research for periods of normally no less than a fortnight and no more than six months in a well-supported and engaged research environment. Fellows are provided with office space, computer facilities and library borrowing privileges, as well as access to research libraries and University facilities and events. There is no stipend associated with the fellowship. No financial support is offered for travel or residential accommodation. We welcome applications from researchers at every career stage from emergent to senior scholars. Fellows are expected to participate in the research cultures of the School and the Faculty through such activities as attending relevant research seminars, presenting work-in-progress and leading graduate masterclasses."

SOCIAL SCIENCES

American Speech-Language-Hearing Foundation

New Investigators Research Grant

Deadline: March 8, 2019

"The American Speech-Language-Hearing Foundation (ASHFoundation) invites new researchers to submit proposals in competition for up to 10 research grants of $10,000 each. The New Investigators Research Grant is designed to help further new investigators' research activities by funding preliminary studies that could launch larger-scale research studies. Research, while not limited in topic, should be focused to match a one-year scope and should have clinical relevance to audiology and/or speech-language pathology."

American Political Science Association

Small Research Grant Program

Deadline: April 15, 2019

"The APSA Small Research Grant Program supports research in all fields of political science. The intent of these grants is to provide funding opportunities for research conducted by political scientists not employed at PhD-granting departments in the field, or who are in non-tenure track or contingent positions ineligible for departmental funding."

National Endowment for the Humanities

Fellowships for Advanced Social Science Research in Japan

Deadline: April 24, 2019

"The Fellowships for Advanced Social Science Research on Japan program is a joint activity of the Japan-U.S. Friendship Commission (JUSFC) and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Awards support research on modern Japanese society and political economy, Japan's international relations, and U.S.-Japan relations. The program encourages innovative research that puts these subjects in wider regional and global contexts and is comparative and contemporary in nature. Research should contribute to scholarly knowledge or to the general public’s understanding of issues of concern to Japan and the United States. Appropriate disciplines for the research include anthropology, economics, geography, history, international relations, linguistics, political science, psychology, public administration, and sociology. Awards usually result in articles, monographs, books, digital materials, archaeological site reports, translations, editions, or other scholarly resources."

LANGUAGE & AREA STUDIES

University of London, School of Advanced Studies, Institute of Modern Languages

Research Fellowship

Deadline: April 30, 2019

"The Institute of Modern Languages Research Fellowship offers opportunities for visiting scholars, with or without funding, to conduct research into any field relevant to the work of the Institute."

STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics)

Breakthrough Prize in Fundamental Physics, Life Science, and Mathematics and New Horizons Prizes

Deadline: April 1, 2019

"For the eighth year, the Breakthrough Prize, recognized as the world’s largest science prize, will honor top scientists, handing out up to four prizes in Life Sciences, one in Fundamental Physics and one in Mathematics. Each prize comes with a $3 million award. In addition, up to six New Horizons Prizes, each for $100,000, will be presented to promising early career researchers in the fields of Physics and Mathematics.” <<more>>

Research Corporation for Science Advancement Cotrell Scholars Award

Deadline: April 15, 2019

"The Cottrell Scholar Award (CSA) is available to early career faculty at US research universities and primarily undergraduate institutions. Eligible applicants are tenure-track faculty members who hold an appointment in a chemistry, physics or astronomy department that offers bachelor’s and/or graduate degrees in the applicant’s discipline. For the 2019 proposal cycle, eligibility is limited to faculty members who started their first tenure-track appointment anytime in calendar year 2016. Accommodations are made for faculty in maternity or paternity leave or with medical conditions that prompted an extension in the tenure clock.” <<more>>

Whitehall Foundation Research Grants and Grants-in-Aid

Deadline: April 15, 2019

Letter of Intent deadline

“Research grants are available to established scientists of all ages working at accredited institutions in the United States. Applications will be judged on the scientific merit and the innovative aspects of the proposal as well as on the competence of the applicant. Research grants of up to three years will be provided. A renewal grant with a maximum of two years is possible, but it will be awarded on a competitive basis. Research grants will not be awarded to investigators who have already received, or expect to receive, substantial support from other sources, even if it is for an unrelated purpose. Research grants normally range from $30,000 to $75,000 per year. The Grants-in-Aid program is designed for researchers at the assistant professor level who experience difficulty in competing for research funds because they have not yet become firmly established. Grants-in-Aid can also be made to senior scientists. All applications will be judged on the scientific merit and innovative aspects of the proposal, as well as on past performance and evidence of the applicant’s continued productivity. Grants-in-Aid are awarded for a one-year period and do not exceed $30,000.” <<more>>

National Science Foundation Industry-University Cooperative Research Centers Program

Deadline: April 17, 2019

"The Industry-University Cooperative Research Centers (IUCRC) program develops long-term partnerships among industry, academe, and government. The Centers are catalyzed by an investment from the National Science Foundation (NSF) and are primarily supported by industry Center members, with NSF taking a supporting role in the development and evolution of the Center. Each Center is established to conduct research that is of interest to both the industry members and the Center faculty. An IUCRC contributes to the nation’s research infrastructure base and enhances the intellectual capacity of the engineering and science workforce through the integration of research and education. As appropriate, an IUCRC uses international collaborations to advance these goals within the global context." <<more>>
